FBI TO GIVE CONGRESS REPORT ON LACK OF CHARGES ON CLINTON

1 The FBI on Tuesday will deliver a report to U.S. lawmakers explaining why the law enforcement agency did not recommend charges over Hillary Clinton's use of a personal email server, CNN reported, citing U.S. officials briefed on the matter. The confidential material, which will include FBI agent memos on their interviews with the Democratic presidential candidate, is classified and cannot be made public, according to CNN. REUTERS

RUSSIA USES IRAN AS BASE TO BOMB SYRIAN MILITANTS FOR FIRST TIME

2 Russia used Iran as a base from which to launch air strikes against Syrian militants for the first time on Tuesday, widening its air campaign in Syria and deepening its involvement in the Middle East. In a move underscoring Moscow's increasingly close ties with Tehran, long-range Russian Tupolev-22M3 bombers and Sukhoi-34 fighter bombers used Iran's Hamadan air base to strike a range of targets in Syria. It was the first time Russia has used the territory of another nation, apart from Syria itself, to launch such strikes since the Kremlin launched a bombing campaign to support Syrian President Bashar al-Assad in September last year. It was also thought to be the first time that Iran has allowed a foreign power to use its territory for military operations since the 1979 Islamic revolution. REUTERS

FED OFFICIALS EYE INTEREST RATE HIKE

ISTOCK

3 The Federal Reserve is raising expectations for an interest rate rise this year, even as early as next month, after two policymakers Tuesday said the economic stars now appear to be aligning despite weak U.S. economic growth in the first half of 2016. New York Fed President William Dudley said "it's possible" to raise rates at the Sept. 20-21 policy meeting given evidence of wage gains and a tighter labor market that could boost inflation, while Dennis Lockhart of the Atlanta Fed said a hike next month is in play. The comments, which prompted investors to boost bets on a rate hike, came nine days before the annual meeting of some of the world's top central bankers in Jackson Hole, Wyoming, a venue the Fed often uses to telegraph policy plans. Kathleen Kane stepping down after conviction

The AG's deputy, Bruce Castor, will take over as acting attorney general.

Pennsylvania Attorney General Kathleen Kane announced her resignation Tuesday, one day after a jury convicted her of perjury for leaking sealed grand jury material to a reporter.

"I have been honored to serve the people of Pennsylvania and I wish them health and safety in all their days," Kane said in a statement.

She faces up to seven years in prison on the most serious charge when she is sentenced Oct. 24.

In a statement, Gov. Tom Wolf said, "Her decision to resign is the right one, and will allow the people of Pennsylvania to finally move on from this situation."

The resignation capped a dramatic fall for Kane, who was once seen as a rising star in the Democratic Party after becoming the first woman elected Pennsylvania attorney general in 2012.

A jury in Norristown found her guilty Monday of leaking information to a reporter in an effort to embarrass a rival prosecutor.

The weeklong trial followed a years-long political scandal that included the Jerry Sandusky molestation case, allegations of misconduct and pornographic emails.

'Porngate'

Prosecutors said Kane was incensed by a 2014 newspaper article that said she had shut down a corruption investigation into Philadelphia officials.

Kane CHARLES MOSTOLLER

"Her decision to resign is the right one, and will allow the people of Pennsylvania to finally move on from this situation."

Convinced that former state prosecutor Frank Fina was the story's source, Kane tried to turn the tables by leaking information about an investigation into a local NAACP official that Fina chose not to pursue, prosecutors said. Kane was accused of subsequently lying about the leak to a grand jury.

Kane had said the charges were brought to stop her from revealing lewd emails exchanged among judges, state officials and prosecutors that she discovered while re-examining the Sandusky investigation.

The release of some emails caused several officials, including two state Supreme Court justices, to lose their jobs in a scandal dubbed "Porngate." But a judge barred Kane's lawyers from mentioning the emails during her trial.

Sandusky, a former assistant football coach at Pennsylvania State University, was convicted in 2012 of molesting 10 boys.

Kane's deputy, Bruce Castor, will take over as acting attorney general.

At a news conference on Tuesday, Castor, a Republican, declined to comment on the verdict, saying he had avoided reading about the case in order to prevent conflicts of interest.

"I came to like and respect Attorney General Kane," he said. "She is not a lawyer to be trifled with. If there is a Mr. Hyde to her Dr. Jekyll, I haven't seen it." REUTERS

Report: Philly DA received more than $160K in gifts

Seth Williams could be facing severe penalties for omitting gifts from his mandatory annual reports.

ALEXIS SACHDEV
alexis.sachdev@metro.us

Philadelphia District Attorney Seth Williams has divulged previously unreported gifts totaling more than $160,000, according to a published report.

The gifts, which range from personal to professional, included free roof repairs ($45,000), free airfare and lodging for vacations to Florid, Virginia, Las Vegas and the Dominican Republic ($20,800), travel expenses for an Eisenhower Fellowship Program in Australia and South Africa ($10,000), travel expenses from the Ministry of Justice of Thailand to teach leadership classes there and cash gifts from friends, which included 76ers and Phillies tickets, the Philadelphia Inquirer reported. These gifts were dated from 2010 through 2015.

According to Philly's ethics code, "gifts" are classified as the following: "payment, subscription, advance, forbearance, rendering or deposit of money, services or anything of value, unless consideration of equal or greater value is received."

DA'S DISAPPROVAL RATING

Williams hasn't commented on the report, save for a statement released through his 2017 reelection campaign that has called for greater transparency.

"I believe that it is very important to provide the citizens of Philadelphia with a greater foundation of trust in their elected officials," the district attorney said in the statement reported by the Inquirer.

Williams failed to include these amounts as part of mandatory annual financial reports. Per ethics rules, city officials could pay as much as $1,000 for not reporting a gift, according to the paper.

Williams' attorney, Samuel C. Stretton, told the paper that penalties could be extensive if each unreported gift is considered a separate violation.

Stretton called Williams' failure to report these gifts "a terrible mistake," and said Williams "wasn't paying attention" to the reporting requirements set forth by the city and state.

The lawyer is looking to negotiate penalties with state and local ethics boards.

It's been a rough couple of years for Williams, as he faces reelection amid dwindling support and the atmosphere of corruption.

Williams has a 71 percent disapproval rating based on his job performance, according to a PoliticsPA poll released at the end of July.

Trouble seemed to begin in 2015, when the Inquirer reported the FBI and IRS were probing Williams' use of campaign funds. Williams also found himself tangled in the ongoing case against Pennsylvania Attorney General Kathleen Kane, whose former prosecutor left Harrisburg and joined Williams' team soon after Kane took office.

Seth Williams MARIA S. YOUNG

Philadelphia Magazine's David Gambacorta reported in July that amid Williams' bid for reelection, the district attorney has lost a crucial support group: the Fraternal Order of Police.

John McNesby, the union's president, said his members will either back another candidate or sit out the election altogether.

"When you're a public figure, you have people looking at you from all over the place. They expect you to lead. You can't indulge in some of the things that he does, because it's a recipe for disaster," McNesby told Philly Mag. "He's a nice guy, but you just don't know what he's thinking half the time."

'SLUSH FUND' IRREGULARITIES

Comptroller: More than $380K in marathon revenue used as 'slush fund'

A review by the City Controller's Office found that more than $380,000 in revenue from the Philadelphia Marathon was used as a "slush fund" for grants not approved by the board, trips to Italy for then Mayor Michael Nutter and his staff, and an event that included an open bar last year.

The report notes 20 line items of grants and expenses from the Mayor's Fund for Philadelphia that went unchecked by the fund's board.

The Fund is responsible for overseeing revenues and expenditures from the race.

Controller Alan Butkovitz told Philly.com the spending was approved only by the fund's then-chairwoman, former City Representative Desiree Peterkin Bell.

"Instead of making grant awards, it appears the former chairperson used the reserves account as if it were a special slush fund," Butkovitz reportedly said at a news conference.

Some of the expenditures reportedly included:

- $51,295 for airfare and five-star lodging to Rome for mayor and five staff members to meet the Pope.
- $52,000 for accommodations at Philadelphia Marriott Courtyard. The line items do not indicate for whom the rooms were provided.
- Nearly $11,000 for an open-bar wine and beer event for a mayor's reception at the African-American Museum.

Butkovitz reportedly said there was no indication of any criminal wrongdoing, but suggested the expenditures could be in violation of IRS rules governing nonprofits.

Nutter has denied that any of the expenditures were improper.

Supporters wait for Clinton at a voter registration rally in Philly. GETTY IMAGES

Clinton rally urges voters to register in high-stakes election

In a city that bleeds a deep shade of blue, Democrats still struggle with getting Philadelphians to the polls every Election Day.

Hillary Clinton is no exception. At a voter-outreach rally Tuesday afternoon at West Philly High School, the Democratic presidential candidate urged people to register to vote before the state's Oct. 11 deadline, and announced the opening of her campaign's Southwest Philly office.

"We don't want you on the sidelines come November," Clinton told the crowd of at least 200 packed in the school's gymnasium. "This is the most consequential election. The stakes could not be higher."

Though Clinton maintains a growing lead ahead of opponent Donald Trump, she warned voters not to become complacent in the 12 weeks ahead of Election Day.

Her campaign has brought on Philly rapper Freeway to help spread the word.

Freeway, born Leslie Pridgen, said he's been very active in inspiring his followers to become politically active, but concedes there's work to be done.

"I would let the young people know that maybe they don't have a full understanding how powerful their voices are," he said. "It's up to all of us to make a change, and we have to do it together."

Voter turnout in Philly consistently lags behind the state average, trailing more than five percentage points in 2008 despite Barack Obama's intense voter outreach.

Even in this one-party town, low turnout could force Pennsylvania to swing right.

Pennsylvania's status as a battleground state has only solidified in recent weeks, as Trump has doubled down on his accusations of voter fraud against Clinton.

"We're going to watch Pennsylvania," Trump said at a rally in Altoona. "The only way we can lose, in my opinion — I really mean this, Pennsylvania — is if cheating goes on."

Still, Trump has since urged his voters to become "election observers."

The latest Pennsylvania poll shows Trump trailing Clinton by more than nine points.

To be clear, when Trump says "Pennsylvania," he means Philadelphia. In 2012, the Philadelphia Inquirer reported that in 59 districts in the city, Mitt Romney received zero votes, a situation that sparked concern among some Republicans, who cried voter fraud on the city.

In the same article, the paper offered an explanation for unanimous support for Obama: The districts, in North and West Philly, are almost exclusively black, and the vast majority of registered voters are Democrats.

"We're Philadelphia, we're not cheaters, we've never been cheaters," Freeway said after Clinton's rally Tuesday. "We've never been a city of cheaters. We're the City of Brotherly Love."

NJ officer charged with trading favors for sex

Robert Marzi, 29, allegedly tried to receive oral sex from a woman in exchange for help with a criminal case.

ALEXIS SACHDEV
@lexsachdev
alexis.sachdev@metro.us

A New Jersey police officer has been suspended after allegedly trying to swap a police favor for a sexual act.

Monroe Township police officer Robert Marzi was charged with misconduct last week following allegations of "unauthorized exercise of his official functions with the purpose to obtain a benefit to himself," the Gloucester County prosecutor's office said Monday.

Marzi, 29, has been suspended without pay. He was placed on administrative leave Monday after a complaint against him was signed Aug. 10, the prosecutor's office said.

The two-year veteran of the force allegedly promised to help a woman with pending criminal charges in exchange for oral sex, the Courier-Post reported.

Marzi turned himself in after learning of the complaint, according to the Courier-Post.

He posted $25,000 bail and has been released.

"It is deeply regretful that a member of the Monroe Township Police Department has been charged with a crime," Monroe Police Chief John McKeown said in a statement. "Like all persons accused of a criminal act, this officer is entitled to due process of the law. I expect this to take time."

The chief said his department will continue to cooperate with the Gloucester County Prosecutor's Office, and will conduct its own administrative investigation.

NY man in court charged with murdering Muslim cleric, assistant

A New York City man appeared in court Tuesday and denied charges he shot and killed a Muslim cleric and his assistant on a street in Queens over the weekend.

Oscar Morel, 35, faces up to life in prison without parole if he is convicted of killing Imam Maulama Akonjee, 55, and Thara Uddin, 64, in a brazen daylight attack Saturday that horrified the neighborhood's Bangladeshi community.

Morel, who was shackled at the hands and feet and wore a tan button-down shirt with black pants, was arraigned at Queens Criminal Court on one count of first-degree murder, two counts of second-degree murder and two counts of second-degree criminal possession of a weapon.

"It's the most horrendous and despicable act that can only be described as a cold-blooded and premeditated assassination," prosecutor Peter McCormack told the court as relatives of the victims looked on.

"The defendant ran up behind both of them and pumped numerous bullets into them striking them both in the head ... leaving them lying in the street mortally wounded," he said.

Oscar Morel GETTY IMAGES

Authorities said Tuesday that the suspect's motive remained unclear, and the possibility it was a hate crime was one theory being explored.

Morel, from Brooklyn, appeared calm and spoke little during his brief appearance. He agreed that surveillance video showed him at the scene of the murders earlier Saturday, but denied being the killer. REUTERS

German man arrested on suspicion of selling gun to Munich shooter

Police on Tuesday arrested an armed 31-year-old German man who boasted during a sting operation that he had supplied the Glock 17 pistol used by a gunman who killed nine people in Munich on July 22, the Frankfurt state prosecutor said in a statement.

Authorities arrested the man, who was not named, in Marburg after contacting him on the so-called dark net and posing as buyers for an automatic weapon and another Glock 17 pistol for $9,021, the statement said.

The man's claims were supported by evidence gathered by the Munich prosecutor's office and Bavarian state police, the statement said.

"There is the strong suspicion that the 31-year-old man sold the Glock 17 used in the Munich shooting to the 18-year-old German-Iranian shortly before the attacks," the Bavarian state police said in a separate statement.

The Frankfurt prosecutor's office said the suspect was identified during unrelated investigations into illegal weapons purchases by a 62-year-old accountant and a 17-year-old student. REUTERS

Clinton names Obama veterans to White House transition team

Four co-chairs were named.

Looking to lay the groundwork for her presidency if she wins the White House in November, Democratic candidate Hillary Clinton named several veterans of President Barack Obama's administration for her transition team Tuesday.

Ken Salazar, a former interior secretary and senator from Colorado, will lead a team of four co-chairs, including one-time national security adviser Tom Donilon and Neera Tanden, a former Obama aide who now leads the progressive Center for American Progress think-tank, the Clinton campaign said.

The other co-chairs are former Michigan Gov. Jennifer Granholm and Maggie Williams, director of Harvard's Institute of Politics.

The announcement came as Clinton has gained momentum in the opinion polls against Republican rival Donald Trump, whose campaign has struggled after he made a string of controversial remarks since formally winning his party's nomination last month.

Clinton has been a secretary of state, senator and first lady, and her transition team includes old names from her long tenure in Washington, some of whom have also served Obama.

Tanden, who played a key role in shaping Obama's health care overhaul, is a longtime

Two policy advisers on the campaign, Ed Meier and Ann O'Leary, will also move full time to the transition team.

Heather Boushey, the executive director of the Washington Center for Equitable Growth, will be the chief economist, the campaign said. Boushey has advised the campaign on economic policy.

Poll: Clinton has 6 point lead over Trump

Hillary Clinton has a 6 percentage point lead over Republican rival Donald Trump, according to a Reuters/Ipsos tracking poll released Tuesday.

Clinton's support has ranged from 41 percent to 44 percent since late July, and was about 41 percent in the Aug. 11-15 online poll.

Trump's support has experienced wider shifts, ranging from 33 percent to 39 percent while his campaign has endured controversies and distractions in recent weeks. He is favored by about 35 percent of likely voters, according to the most recent poll. REUTERS

Nine dead, thousands of homes ravaged in Louisiana floods

Storm broke records for a 24-hour rainfall.

Search-and-rescue operations were still underway on Tuesday in Louisiana, where at least nine people have died in flooding that damaged about 40,000 homes, state officials said.

Emergency crews have already plucked more than 20,000 people and 1,000 pets to safety from flooded areas after a storm that broke records for 24-hour rainfall in multiple locations, Gov. John Bel Edwards told reporters in Baton Rouge.

Rain-swollen rivers are receding in much of the state, but some communities in southern Louisiana are bracing for waters that have not yet crested, according to national forecasters.

More than 8,000 people slept in emergency shelters on Monday night, unable to return to their homes, Edwards told a news conference. The state planned to impose curfews on Tuesday night in the parishes with widespread damage.

"This is a historic flooding event," Edwards said of the unnamed storm. "It's unprecedented."

The storm dumped more than 2.5 feet of rain on an area near Watson, Louisiana, from Thursday to Monday morning, the highest total reported, according to the National Weather Service.

In Abbeville, Louisiana, a 125-year-old record for 24-hour rainfall was shattered by 16.38 inches of rain from Friday to Saturday, the weather service reported.

The flooding prompted President Barack Obama to issue a disaster declaration on Sunday, with additional parishes given approval on Tuesday to be eligible for the federal assistance.

Already, 40,000 residents have registered for disaster aid, Edwards said.

Craig Fugate, head of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, told reporters the "very large disaster" was affecting more people than flooding in March that left at least four dead and thousands of homes damaged in Louisiana and Mississippi.

Louisiana will mark the 11th anniversary later this month of Hurricane Katrina, which killed more than 1,800 people when floods overwhelmed levees and broke through flood walls protecting New Orleans on Aug. 29, 2005.

The state's death toll from the latest inundation rose to nine on Tuesday with the discovery of a 58-year-old man's body near his home in East Baton Rouge Parish. The man died of an accidental drowning, parish coroner Dr. Beau Clark said in a phone interview.

In Tangipahoa Parish, authorities believe that a 20-year-old woman found inside her car was killed after her vehicle was washed right off the road, leaving it completely submerged.

A 59-year-old man who died in the same parish appeared to have been swept away by rushing floodwaters.

Many in Louisiana are trying to reach friends and relatives displaced by the storm, the governor acknowledged, noting that most were likely safe but without communications.

"We understand that there are a lot of people who are suffering," Edwards said. REUTERS

BEAR HUNT

Canada officials may charge U.S. hunter who speared bear to death

Alberta may file charges against a U.S. hunter who posted a video of himself killing a black bear with a spear, wildlife officials said Tuesday, as the Canadian province moved to ban spear hunting.

The video, which sparked outrage online, shows hunter Josh Bowmar, who is a javelin thrower, baiting a trap for the bear in a wooded area and then impaling the animal with a long spear with a camera attached to it.

Bowmar, 26, defended the way he killed the bear, while Alberta Environment Ministry spokesman Kyle Ferguson described the hunt as "unacceptable" and "archaic."

"We will introduce a ban on spear hunting this fall," Ferguson said. "In the meantime, we have asked Fish and Wildlife officers to investigate this incident to determine if charges are warranted under existing laws."

Bowmar uploaded the video in June, local media reported. It appears to have been taken down, but has since been uploaded onto other YouTube accounts. REUTERS

Prosecutors dealt setback in medical marijuana cases

Prosecutors will not receive funding to go after medical marijuana sales if permissible under state guidelines. ISTOCK

The Department of Justice cannot spend money to prosecute federal marijuana cases if the defendants comply with state guidelines that permit the drug's sale for medical purposes, a federal appeals court ruled Tuesday.

The ruling, from the Ninth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, comes as voters in nine more states will consider allowing the recreational use of marijuana this November.

Twenty-five U.S. states allow for medical marijuana. While the sale of the drug is still illegal under federal law, Congress in 2014 passed a budget rule that prohibits the DOJ from using federal funds to interfere in the implementation of state marijuana regulations.

Due to this rule, defendants in 10 cases in California and Washington argued that their federal charges should be dismissed. The Ninth Circuit in San Francisco, which covers nine Western states, ruled Tuesday that the DOJ could not spend money as long as those defendants "strictly complied" with all state regulations.

STATES ALLOW MEDICAL MARIJUANA

The appeals court sent the cases back to lower courts to determine if the defendants had complied with state law. In November California and eight other states will consider whether to allow marijuana for recreational use. Colorado, Washington, Oregon and Alaska, as well as the District of Columbia, already permit it.

The unanimous ruling Tuesday was issued by a three-judge panel, two of whom are Republican appointees with a history of pro-law enforcement opinions.

Despite the outcome, however, Judge Diarmuid O'Scannlain wrote that medical marijuana purveyors should not feel immune from federal law.

"Congress could restore funding tomorrow, a year from now or four years from now," he wrote, "and the government could then prosecute individuals who committed offenses while the government lacked funding." REUTERS

Amber Heard and Johnny Depp settle for $7 million

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

And after all that, it's over.

Amber Heard and Johnny Depp are officially divorced following her withdrawal of the domestic violence petition she filed in late May. The actress will receive a reported settlement of $7 million — a million less than she requested — including attorney fees, according to TMZ's sources. In a joint statement, the "Rum Diary" co-stars and former lovers said: "Our relationship was intensely passionate and at times volatile, but always bound by love. ... Neither party has made false accusations for financial gains."

TMZ (and everyone else who can read) was quick to point out the line that states no "false accusations for financial gains" were made by either party (read: her), meaning Heard's domestic abuse claims against Depp very well sound kind-of-sort-of-OK-probably-definitely valid.

The statement was released following a series of bizarre events — including recently released footage of Depp using his wounded finger tip and blue paint to write "Billy Bob" and "Easy Amber" on a mirror in 2015. Billy Bob Thornton denies having cheated with Heard, calling the accusation "completely false."

Kim Kardashian did get butt injections — but not for the reason you think

Kim Kardashian West definitely has one of the most voluptuous bods in Hollywood. But, over the years her booty has come under a lot of serious scrutiny.

After years of constant speculation, the "KUWTK" star revealed that she did, in fact, get butt injections — but it's not what you think.

The reality star spilled on a recent LiveStream that she has to get periodic cortisone butt injections because of her psoriasis condition, "Every few years I get a cortisone shot. I just got one as my psoriasis was so bad in Vegas. That's a little unknown fact of me, I have to get cortisone shots every few years."

The 35-year-old has always been very open about her condition, she even spoke about it on a 2011 "KUWTK" episode. Apparently, the procedure spurred the butt-implants rumors because she was photographed with a literal dent in her butt.

"One of my neighbors was a dermatologist at Cedars [Sinai Hospital]. I go in there and he's like, 'There's a one in a billion chance that you will get a huge indent in your butt.' Of course I get a huge indent on my butt."

Kim K recalls the exact moment when the controversy over her rear end started: "There is a picture of me in Miami wearing an electric-blue dress, and another picture of me walking down Robertson. You see the indent. And I think that's when the rumors started: 'She's had implants.'"

Amy Schumer found comedy through tragedy

If you're looking for a light, funny summer read, comedian Amy Schumer's book of essays, "The Girl with the Lower Back Tattoo," is not it.

Though she does it with her usual self-effacing charm, Schumer details how her life has not so much inspired her comedy but driven her to it. She recounts painful moments like losing her virginity in a nonconsensual encounter at age 17, nearly losing her leg in a surfing accident and being in a physically and emotionally abusive relationship during her 20s.

But one of the most painful parts of life is when we discover our parents are only human. In the book, she recalls coming home at 13 to find her mother sobbing, then confessing to an ongoing affair with her best friend's married father. Schumer's own father had been battling multiple sclerosis since she was 12, and last year she talked about turning to comedy to keep her family's spirits up.

"I look at the saddest things in life and laugh about how awful they are, because they are hilarious and it's all we can do with moments that are painful," she writes. Check it out for laughs, and some tears.

How to drive a chariot

For Jack Huston, the hardest part of "Ben-Hur" wasn't playing one of Charlton Heston's biggest roles.

MATT PRIGGE
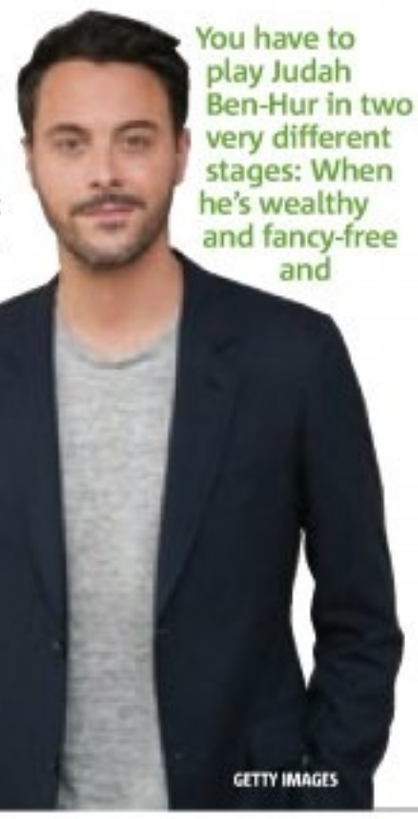
matt.prigge@metro.us

It's no small feat to step into shoes already worn by Charlton Heston. Luckily for John Huston, he had a couple aces up his sleeve. For one thing, the English actor, 33, is Hollywood royalty: He's one of the Hustons, related to Anjelica, Danny, John and Walter. As luck would have it, he's known Fraser Heston, Charlton's son, since he was a kid. Before taking the lead in the new remake of "Ben-Hur," he asked Fraser for his blessing, and got it. And so here Huston is as 2016's own Judah Ben-Hur, the Jewish nobleman who seeks revenge on the friend (played by Toby Kebbell) who destroyed his family. That also means having to endure the film's centerpiece: a redo of the famed chariot race, which took three grueling months to shoot.



You have to play Judah Ben-Hur in two very different stages: When he's wealthy and fancy-free and when he's starving and ripped. It must be particularly rough not eating great food when you're shooting in Rome.

If you're in the galleys of a slave ship, you're not going to be eating three-course Italian meals. You're just rowing every day. So I went a little Method and managed to drop down to 155 pounds. That's pretty nuts.

How did you do that?

It's kind of a funny story. The studio gave me a chef who's also a nutritionist. He was this wonderful Italian man named Giuliano who loved cooking and had the best heart. And he was just in a state of disarray every day. He'd come in to hand the food out, and I could see he wanted to cry every time. He had to make me the most bland, boring food — proteins and veg and no salt. It was tearing him apart inside. He really wanted to cook me the most extravagant pasta dishes with the best wine.

In the new "Ben-Hur," Jack Huston takes over the role once played by Charlton Heston, playing a Jewish nobleman out to avenge the friend (Toby Kebbell) who betrayed his family. PARAMOUNT PICTURES

Instead he was under strict instructions not do give me any food with any flavor.

Speaking of pushing yourself to the limit, tell me about the chariot race. You already knew how to ride a horse coming into this, but that's nothing like driving four of them.

I was very comfortable and confident with horses; I could ride like I could walk. I thought that would give me a leg-up. But nothing really prepares you for a chariot — four horses and the end of your rein. There's a reason why we still refer to the power of cars as "horsepower." It's like something you've never felt before. And the horses loved it. They just want to run. They're basically racing each other. They don't even know they've got a 150-pound person behind them.

How long did it take you to feel like a pro?

We had about three-and-a-half months of training, which starts with a seated car, then you progress to two horses and finally four. It's quite a rigorous process. The first day you're convinced you're going to die. Then the second day, funnily enough, it sort of becomes addictive. You don't think about anything when you're on that chariot, going around the track at full speed. When you're really tearing it, you are literally only focusing on the job at hand. You don't question yourself; you're not in that constant battle for your life. It's rather meditative. It's liberating to be free of one's ways.

Another reason to be excited for 'Rogue One'

Geek Girl in Hollywood

Felicity Jones' Jyn Erso, hero of the forthcoming "Star Wars" film "Rogue One," out Dec. 16, appears to be a complex female character. LUCASFILM

There have been endless articles about the "Rogue One: A Star Wars Story" trailer since it premiered last week. There are bound to be more with the arrival of the international trailer, which features brand-new footage. I'm not going to break the trailers down for you, as it's been done over and over. I do, however, want to tell you a different reason I'm excited about the movie. I mean, aside from the fact that it looks amazing. I mean, really amazing. I mean, I love this trailer more than warm oatmeal cookies with drizzled icing. But that's not the only reason why.

When I was a kid, I was introduced to Anne McCaffrey's book series "Pern." The world was full of dragons and riders; it totally sucked me in. The way I got in, however, was through a side trilogy, written about an at-the-time relatively minor character named Menolly. McCaffrey would go back to her world and tell minor stories and weave them in to give a wider picture of a larger universe. You got a look into not just the major characters, but also what else was going on and the lives of other people.

As a kid, seeing the original "Star Wars" trilogy, I wanted to know more. I wanted to know where regular people lived and where the rest of the Rebellion was. I wanted to know how many other worlds there were. I wanted to know about the "many Bothans" who died to give the Rebellion information. I wanted to know where Princess Leia got the Death Star plans before she gave them to R2-D2.

The announcement of "Rogue One" was childhood wish fulfillment. Just as the original "expanded universe" did for years, in the form of books, video games and comics, this will fill in holes. "Star Wars Rebels" and "The Clone Wars" have done the same. I'm dying to know everything about everything!

And then there's Felicity Jones' Jyn Erso, our hero. Yes, she's still one of the only ladies in a giant group of men, but she clearly kicks butt and isn't exactly perfect. It feels like writing a well-rounded female action hero is becoming the norm, as opposed to "tough chick in black leather." Jyn, Katniss, Rey — it's finally happening. To learn about another amazing and complex female character, one we didn't know about before (like we did with Ahsoka Tano, Hera and Sabine), and to see the trailer on my TV; to see the new planet Jedha, a U-Wing transport gunship, the size of K-2SO, Darth Vader; to see yet another part of my all-time favorite fantasy universe — well, it's pretty darn awesome.

On Aug. 25, the National Park Service will be turning 100 years old and park enthusiasts won't have to travel too far to wish them a happy birthday.

Independence National Historical Park will kick off Founders Day on Independence Mall at 10 a.m. with a plaque ceremony honoring Stephen Mather, one of the founders of the park service, followed with a variety of free ranger programs including a special centennial walking tour, national park quizzo and a chance for your kids to enlist in the Continental Army.

Visitors to the park will also get to enjoy free admission to the Ben Franklin Museum located right at Third and Market streets.

And after a full day of activities, who can turn down a invitation to picnic in the park?

Beginning at 5 p.m., attendees can either pack their own basket or purchase a premade one for two at the nearby Independence Mall Cafe. Adults, it's BYOB! The picnic will also be your only chance to see a time capsule that will be sealed that day and placed inside the Independence Hall Tower where it will remain until Aug. 25, 2116, the bicentennial of the National Park Service. What's inside, you ask? The public is encouraged to vote on their favorite items to be included such as an arrowhead patch, a key to Independence Hall and even a Lego park ranger.

But where's the cake? Franklin Fountain to the rescue! The Old City favorite will debut a special birthday cake flavor ice cream to the hungry patrons; first come, first served. The evening will wrap up with some foot-stomping bluegrass by the local band Mason Porter and a campfire talk about the stars. Discover America's story here in the birthplace of independence.

Happy birthday, NPS!

Rejoice, 'GOT' fans: 'Burlesque Is Coming'

Based on the HBO series, the sultry spoof has a lot of nudity to live up to.

MONICA WEYMOUTH
@MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

The way Moxie LaBouche sees it, "Game of Thrones" was all but asking for a burlesque spinoff. Although, to be fair, with a stage name like Moxie LaBouche, it's obvious that she has a knack for spotting striptease potential.

"Anything we want to share with our audience, we want to share by taking our clothes off," says LaBouche, a fan of the wildly popular HBO series as well as the producer of the Virginia-based Blacklist Burlesque troupe. "I like to joke that there's less nudity in our show than the original."

Her show would be "Burlesque Is Coming," a bawdy mix of comedy, striptease and sideshow that swings through World Cafe Live this Friday. Although not the first burlesque act set in the Seven Kingdoms, it is the one and only to win the approval of George R.R. Martin, author of "A Song of Ice and Fire," the novels on which the show is based.

GOT meets Burlesque

Touring since 2014, the latest incarnation of "Burlesque is Coming" features all new material and appearances from fan-fave characters including Daenerys Targaryen, the Lannister siblings and, of course, Jon Snow. No idea who Melisandre is? No problem. "We wanted to make a show for everyone, from diehard fans to people who have never even seen 'Game of Thrones,'" says LaBouche. "There's something called the 'nerdlesque bull's-eye' that we try to hit. Everyone can enjoy it, but some people will just be laughing a little bit harder than others."

These peel-and-stick wallpapers are easier than paint.

Why haven't you considered wallpapering? The same reason you didn't consider making French toast this morning: It's messy, it's time-consuming — and real talk: A bagel does the job just fine. Between the scraping and the pasting, traditional wallpaper has more than earned its reputation as the worst weekend project ever. But as for these easy-up, easy-down removable papers, well, they might just have you rethinking that next coat of paint.

3 Philly poolside homes that will keep summer alive

8520 Hagys Mill Rd. SOTHEBY'S

ALEXIS SACHDEV
@MetroPhilly

Summer 2016 gave us Pokemon Go, more Taylor Swift drama than we ever asked for and that annoyingly catchy Justin Timberlake song. If you're not ready to let go just yet, here are three poolside properties on the market to live out your endless summer dreams.

8320 Hagys Mill Road

Tucked away in a pocket of Roxborough, this stunning 300-acre property doesn't feel like it's only 20 minutes from Center City.

Originally built in the 1860s, this home combines classic and contemporary with five bedrooms, six bathrooms, a gym, media room, heated two-car garage and a brick terrace overlooking the property's countryside-style gardens. Several seating spots and a working fireplace ready for backyard barbecues surround the home's infinity pool and spa.

At $3.5 million, this luxury property can be as inviting — with its separate guest house as a space for friends and family — or as secluded as you'd like.

1420 Locust St.

Be in the middle of it all at the coveted Academy House.

This piece of prime real estate is conveniently located off Broad Street and steps from the Kimmel Center. Residents of this luxury building also get access to an indoor pool and steam room for when winter rears its predictably ugly head, as well as a fitness center and valet parking.

With two bedroom and two bathrooms, this $659,900 condo is actually a combination of two residences, with plenty of space for relaxing.

8100 Lincoln Dr.

Built in 1926, this three-story English Village-style home is just steps from the heart of Chestnut Hill.

Handsome architectural details fill the home, from its stone entryway, hand-carved wood work and original beamed ceilings. On a secluded acre of land, enjoy privacy outside in the custom pool or hot tub, or upstairs on a balcony overlooking the yard. For $1.5 million, retreat to this luxurious property with expansive rooms.

Many are impressed with the Eagles' move, sending a backup offensive lineman for potential star Dorial Green-Beckham. GETTY IMAGES

Is Eagles move to bring in Green-Beckham a desperation signing?

With a lackluster group of wide receivers, the Eagles are taking a low risk, high reward move with Green-Beckham.

EVAN MACY
evan.macy@metro.us

Overheard among chatting Eagles fans during last weekend's open practice at Lincoln Financial Field were musings that this season's wide receiver corps is possibly the weakest in recent memory.

Jordan Matthews — entering his third year after a solid but not spectacular sophomore season — leads a WR room of never-weres and has-beens, like disappointments Nelson Agholor and Josh Huff, along with veterans Reuben Randle and Chris Givens and a few other undrafted free agents.

Make room for one more.

Early Tuesday the Eagles announced they had traded journeyman offensive tackle Dennis Kelly to the Titans for troubled wide receiver Dorial Green-Beckham.

DGB, as he's often called, was forced to transfer from Missouri to Oklahoma due to some off-field issues, and has three times had legal troubles — most of which stem from drugs or marijuana.

But, when he's on the field he can be quite the force.

"He's physically gifted," Eagles president of football operations Howie Roseman said. "He's 6-foot-5, 204 pounds, he runs a 4.4 40 [yard dash], he's got a rare skill set but there's a reason he's available at this time. He has to get more consistent but to us it's a risk that's worth taking."

As a rookie, Green-Beckham caught 32 passes for 549 yards and two touchdowns. His big body could be just what the Eagles need to run a meaningful slant or fade route.

"We've done our due diligence to the extent that we can and there's nothing that we've seen that makes us think there is anything going on," Roseman said of the 40th overall pick in 2015.

Doug Pederson has had his share of off-field issues to deal with already during his tenure as head coach, but he welcomes anyone with talent to help his club.

"I kind of take a chip off of Andy Reid's block," Pederson told the media Tuesday. "We had a Michael Vick who had definitely situations there.

"I'm going to preface this by saying we are not in the rehabilitation business. But at the same time, we feel like with the staff that I've assembled on offense and with the personnel staff upstairs, that we can bring guys in that might have had a little bit of a history and we can help these players not only become young men, but become good football players."

Eagles add Dawkins full time to help with young players

The Eagles are taking chances with players with trouble in their past, the latest of which is former Titans wide receiver Dorial Green-Beckham, who comes to Philadelphia following a trade that sent lineman Dennis Kelly to Tennessee.

With players like Jalen Mills and Wendell Smallwood also looking to shake off shackled of troubled pasts — among others — the Eagles are bringing in Weapon X to help keep them on the straight and narrow.

Literally.

In a news conference Tuesday, Eagles president of football operations Howie Roseman announced that Brian Dawkins, the former Eagles star safety and fan favorite, will join the team full time as a "football operations executive."

"We have hired Brian Dawkins full time to help at this time," Roseman said of Dawkins, who was a scout for the Eagles earlier in training camp. "His week here, we saw the contributions her can bring to the football team and we feel like we will get a structure in place and help these guys to succeed."

Dawkins previously worked as a commentator for ESPN football studio shows and before that, obviously, had a Hall of Fame career leading the Eagles' defense during the team's most recent era of success in the early 2000s.

Green-Beckham's second chance after falling on the depth chart in Tennessee amid off-field troubles and locker room issues could bail out a desperate Eagles offense looking for sparks. Roseman believes that players like one-time Eagle Michael Vick can put their troubles in the rearview and succeed in the right environment.

"It's an organizational decision here and it's on all of us to rally around these guys and give them a support system," Roseman said.

Phils' Eickhoff just can't get past the sixth inning

The starting pitcher has a 12.71 ERA after the sixth inning this season.

KYLE PHILLIPPI
@Kyle_Phillippi
sports@metro.us

GETTY IMAGES

There's times where his curveball looks unhittable and others where it looks like hitters know exactly where his pitches are headed. More times than not, these Jekyll and Hyde moments happen in the same game. Those low points of his often sync up with the start of the sixth inning.

It happened again in his last start on Saturday against Colorado.

"The sixth inning again, I don't what it is, if it's fatigue ... he just lost his command in that sixth inning," said Phillies manager Pete Mackanin.

When asked what his struggles stem from, Eickhoff, who gave up three runs in the sixth frame, didn't really have an answer other than that when teams figure out his breaking ball, it takes a lot away from his ability to fool hitters.

"We've got to go to work on that and see what that problem is," Mackanin said.

In his career, the sixth inning has been a disaster — he has a career ERA of 9.75 in 28 career sixth innings. That's the highest by far among the first seven frames (he's only reached the eighth inning one time in his career). This season, that ERA is at a whopping 12.71.

In comparison, the 26-year-old has a 1.75 ERA through the first three innings this season and a 2.16 ERA over the first four frames. It's the fifth and sixth innings that have become disastrous for him. He has allowed just 22 earned runs from the first to fourth inning and only three runs between the seventh and eighth inning. When it comes to those middle two innings, he has allowed 35 earned runs — 46 percent of his ERA.

Mackanin doesn't seem like he knows what that steep drop-off is a result of, other than fatigue. If that's the case, at least it's something a player can improve upon. This is just Eickhoff's second year in the big leagues. It wouldn't be fair to expect him to be an innings eater right off the bat.

That being said, if these issues are determined to be more mechanical than physical, perhaps this trend of his won't be going away anytime soon. From the diagnosis Eickhoff gave, it sounds like he may have bigger issues at hand. If he is unable to get pitches by hitters as soon as they figure out his curve ball, then he's going to really need to develop another secondary pitch and his fastball this offseason.

If Eickhoff wants to continue to be among the starting five when the Phillies contend again, he'll have to figure out his sixth-inning nightmares.

Aries You can make personal changes that will help you present and promote your agenda in a winning fashion. Your ability to wheel and deal will help you get ahead financially.

Taurus Don't feel obliged to take on someone else's problems or responsibilities. Stick to your own ventures and the people you can count on to contribute. Love is in the stars.

Gemini Too much of anything will lead to problems. Don't make promises you cannot keep or overspend on people trying to buy love and favors. A self-help program will pay off.

Cancer You'll find comfort in pursuing a creative hobby or getting involved in a project or course that will help you gain insight into what you want to do next.

Leo Personal change will allow you greater freedom. Handle situations responsibly, but don't lose sight of what's best for you. Let your intuition guide you and your emotions.

Virgo Get to know the people you are working with better. There is power in understanding those you are dealing with. Share little about yourself, but ask many questions.

Libra Networking will bring about positive changes in partnerships and the way you handle others. Confidence will give you an advantage over those who challenge you.

Scorpio If you think about how you earn your living or handle your cash, you will come up with a plan that will help you stabilize your personal and financial situations.

Sagittarius With a little finagling and enthusiasm you will excel, but don't be surprised if someone pressures you or challenges your ideas. Have an alternative plan in place to avoid delays.

Capricorn Don't hide facts, but don't offer information that will incriminate you. If you use unusual tactics to get what you want, you will discover interesting resources.

Aquarius Don't back down. Share your opinion and honor your beliefs. Once you bring about changes that ease your stress, your emotional outlook will improve.

Pisces Get hidden agendas out in the open so you can make a good decision based on facts, not on hearsay. Challenge and resolve any misconception you have. EUGENIA LAST
